CERTIFIED ROADSIDE MARKET PROGRAM BRINGS FRESH PRODUCE TO SC COMMUNITIES

BY EVA MOORE

Whether they're farmers selling their own products, or small-business owners who like to work outside and meet customers, the people behind South Carolina's 150-plus Certified Roadside Markets are ambassadors for agriculture.

for prospective market owners puts it, "Simply building a structure does not ensure success." In addition to finding customers and ensuring they return, market owners may need to work through zoning laws and business licensing, parking issues,

Hand Farm Market in Longs, South Carolina is a new member of the Certified Roadside Market Program. The market sells seasonal produce such as squash, cucumbers, watermelons, okra, collards and sweet potatoes. Courtesy photo.

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture's Certified Roadside Market program helps increase the availability of South Carolina-grown food and improves the quality of roadside markets around the state by promoting fair and sanitary marketing and business practices. As program members, markets agree to certain best practices in exchange for promotion by SCDA.

"The main requirement is you sell South Carolina produce, when it's in season, and have a permanent structure – no tents or tailgates," says Ansley Turnblad, a marketing coordinator with the South Carolina Department of Agriculture who runs the Certified Roadside Market program.

Some markets are seasonal, such as those that sell blueberries and strawberries, while others operate year-round. Some Certified Roadside Markets are on-farm stands or stores operated by the farmers themselves or their families. Other markets buy product from farmers to re-sell.

"You don't necessarily have to grow the produce, but you have to sell in-season South Carolina produce," Turnblad explains.

That's just the beginning, though. As a tip sheet and sourcing product, among other issues.

The Certified Roadside Market program is codified in state law. Markets are inspected regularly to ensure they meet program standards.

Membership in the program is free, and comes with valuable benefits: Certified Roadside Markets are listed on the SCDA website and in a free printed directory that's distributed around the state's welcome centers and at special events. Markets also get a free Certified South Carolina sign. The Certified brand enjoys more than 80 percent brand recognition among South Carolina consumers, so it's an excellent promotional tool.

For Turnblad, the program gives her a chance to do what she loves best: learn from farmers.

"One of the perks of this job is the creativity of the farmers – how humble and hardworking they are," Turnblad says. "One of the best parts of working roadside markets is getting out and meeting the farmers. They like to sell good produce and products to their communities. Farmers are proud of what they grow and enjoy sharing the fruits of their labor."

To learn more about joining the Certified Roadside Market program, including a list of rules and regulations, a readiness checklist, and the application form, visit agriculture.sc.gov/where-to-buy-local/certified-roadside-markets. You can also use this link to search all Certified Roadside Markets by county and keyword. For more information, contact Ansley Turnblad at aturnblad@scda.sc.gov or 803-734-2207.

AN AUTUMN LIKE NO OTHER

It doesn't happen often in South Carolina: The weather started feeling like fall right around the same time the calendar said it was fall. Thanks, Mother Nature!

So many things about this fall are different, though.

For one thing, the South Carolina State Fair has changed its plans dramatically and will be a free two-day drive-thru event. On Oct. 20-21, visitors can drive through exhibits featuring farm animals, quilts and craft items, plus an area with classic fair foods. I commend the State Fair for finding a creative way to continue connecting people to agriculture and fair traditions during these unusual times.

The Fall Plant and Flower Festivals at our State Farmers Markets are another fall tradition for many South Carolinians. In past years, these events have attracted thousands of people. This year, rather than hosting one high-volume weekend festival, we're spreading out the fall festivities throughout the month of October. Whether you're near the Midlands, Pee Dee or the Upstate, you can visit your nearby State Farmers Market in October to buy pumpkins, mums, fall plants, Certified SC Grown fall produce, fall décor and garden essentials, and much more. Blanche brought home some mums from the market just last week.

On a more serious note, this is also a time of year when drivers encounter more farm equipment on South Carolina's roads as farmers move tractors and machinery from site to site. Just last week I drove around a curve on a secondary road and came up behind a farmer moving his peanut digger to another field. A study published last year by the New York Center for Agricultural Medicine and Health found that road crashes involving tractors and other agricultural vehicles are five times more likely to be fatal than non-ag crashes. Distracted drivers play a part in that statistic.

What's more, most of these crashes occur on straightaways with a grade, suggesting that many accidents occur when drivers try to pass slow-moving ag equipment.

Here at SCDA, we've been using social media to remind South Carolina drivers to be patient with farm equipment. These are some of the tips we're putting out there – feel free to share them with your own community on social media:

SLOW DOWN. If you see the slow-moving vehicle emblem, touch your brakes in plenty of time – the equipment may be moving at 25 mph or less.

STAY BACK. Make sure the driver can see you behind them.

PASS WITH CARE. Wait until it's safe to pass, and do so cautiously as equipment may be extra-wide.

Stay safe, and enjoy the fall.

Avoid Scams When Buying or Selling

BY EVA MOORE

From time to time, we hear from Market Bulletin advertisers who’ve received suspicious offers to buy items they’ve listed for sale. Often these buyers are located in another state or country and refuse to meet in person, and may offer to pay with an easily falsifiable payment method like a money order.

Market Bulletin sales are usually “farmer-to-farmer,” but advertising products for sale does open you up to potential scams.

Buyers, too, should be cautious. While our staff takes steps to ensure sellers are local and legitimate, and to investigate complaints, some bad-faith sellers may occasionally slip through.

Here are some ways to protect yourself.

BUY AND SELL IN PERSON. Most scams rely on distance. Whether you’re selling hay, honey or a harvester, you can avoid being duped by exchanging items and money in person.

VERIFY THE PAYMENT. Avoid wire transfers, cashier’s checks and money orders, which can be fake. If accepting a personal check, ask your bank to verify it before handing anything over.

DON’T GIVE OUT PERSONAL INFORMATION. Never give out your bank account numbers, Social Security number or other private information.

TRUST YOUR GUT. If a transaction is moving too fast or something doesn’t feel right, slow down. And don’t hesitate to ask a trusted friend or family member for their opinion.

Don’t be ashamed if you do fall victim to a scam; scammers have developed methods that work on the best of us. Contact the police to file a report.

Harvest Season at the Market

OCTOBER 2020

Join our State Farmers Markets in celebrating the fall Harvest Season.

Throughout the month of October, vendors will feature fall flowers, pumpkins, Certified South Carolina seasonal produce, and much more.

Visit us October 1 – November 1 for décor and items to put everyone in the Harvest Season spirit.

Please contact the market for its operating hours. Due to COVID-19, Harvest Season will be celebrated throughout October rather than one high-attendance weekend.

SHELLFISH SEASON OPENS OCT. 1

STORY AND PHOTOS BY SCDNR

CHARLESTON COUNTY, S.C. — Oyster lovers take note: The 2020-2021 season for recreational harvest of shellfish (clams and oysters) in coastal waters of South Carolina is set to open one-half hour before official sunrise on Thursday, October 1, 2020. The recreational shellfish season will remain open through May 15, 2021, unless conditions warrant extending or shortening the season.

In the event of another hurricane, major rain event, or pollution spill, shellfish beds may be temporarily closed by the South Carolina Department of Health & Environmental Control (DHEC). It is important for harvesters to check with DHEC to verify whether any closures are in effect. This information is available at 1-800-285-1618 and can be viewed on an interactive map at the DHEC website. DHEC will use these resources and your local newspaper throughout the year to announce temporary closures due to unusual rain events or spills.

The South Carolina Department of Natural Resources (SCDNR) maintains State Shellfish Grounds for commercial and recreational harvesting of clams and oysters. Twenty Public Shellfish Grounds and 13 State Shellfish Grounds are managed exclusively for recreational gathering. An additional 52 State Shellfish Grounds are managed for recreational and commercial harvest. All state-managed grounds are posted with boundary signs.

Recreational harvesters should obtain updated Public or State Shellfish Ground maps at the beginning of each season, as areas open to harvest change from year to year. Maps of designated harvest areas may be downloaded from the SCDNR website or accessed online through the Recreational Map Web Application. Printed maps may also be obtained by calling (843) 953-9854 or writing the Shellfish Management Section, Attn: Ben Dyar, SCDNR, PO Box 12559, Charleston, SC 29422-2559. When requesting maps, please specify the general area where you wish to harvest. Maps for the 2019-20 season will be available prior to season opening on October 1, 2020.

Recreational harvesters must have a Saltwater Recreational Fishing License, available from SCDNR, at many fishing supply stores, and online. The recreational limit is two U.S. bushels of oysters and one-half bushel of clams in any one day, limited to two calendar days per seven-day period. One U.S. bushel is equal to 8 gallons. There is a maximum possession of three personal limits per boat or vehicle. Clams must be at least 1 inch in thickness.

Additional rules and restrictions may be found in the SCDNR Rules and Regulations, available where licenses are purchased or online.

Commercial harvest of shellfish requires a commercial saltwater license, mandatory harvester training, and other licenses and permits depending on where the harvest will occur. Call the Marine Permitting Office at (843) 953-0453 for additional information on commercial harvesting requirements.

All harvesters are encouraged to "cull in place," leaving dead shell and smaller oysters on the shoreline where they will continue to grow and provide habitat for future generations of oysters.

Oyster consumers are encouraged to recycle their shells. Check online or call (843) 953-9397 to find locations near you where shell can be dropped off for recycling.

SCDNR uses saltwater recreational fishing license revenues to construct and enhance renewable oyster resources in the coastal counties by replanting recycled shell. All shell collected by the SCDNR is used to restore shellfish grounds in coastal South Carolina.

SC FARMERS CAN NOW APPLY ONLINE FOR A PRODUCE SAFETY RULE EXEMPTION

BY SCDA

COLUMBIA – There are about 2,700 produce farms in South Carolina – and many are potentially exempt from the Produce Safety Rule, meaning they would not have to undergo routine inspections by the South Carolina Department of Agriculture’s Produce Safety team. But unless a farm has applied for an exemption and received a certificate from SCDA, they are not exempt. Exemption certificates are only good for one year, so farms must re-apply every year for exemption.

Fortunately, SCDA has made the process easier with a new digital application tool for Produce Safety Exemptions.

To view exemption requirements and complete the application, visit prsexemption.agriculture.sc.gov

The Produce Safety Rule is part of the FDA Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA) passed in 2011. This regulation focuses on setting federal regulatory standards for the production, harvest, and handling of fruits and vegetables, in an effort to prevent microbial contamination and reduce foodborne illnesses associated with fresh produce.

Questions? Contact Brooke Horton, SCDA’s Produce Safety Outreach Coordinator, at bhorton@scda.sc.gov

WHY JOIN SC GREEN?

BY SCDA AND SC GREEN

Formed in 2017 as the result of a merger between the SC Nursery and Landscape Association and the SC Turfgrass Association, the SC Green Industry Association is dedicated to advancing South Carolina’s landscape industry.

“Our goals are to increase professionalism and advance the landscape industry through ongoing educational opportunities, trade shows and scholarships,” says Adrienne Patrick, executive director of SC Green. “We also strive to be a resource to the public with tips from professionals in the landscape, nursery and irrigation businesses.”

The major cities and towns in the state along with the universities and colleges are members of SC Green. Truck, farm and turf equipment dealers and manufacturers such as Husqvarna, Stihl, and Toro will be found on the roster. Santee-Cooper, Lexington Medical Center, the National Park Association, SCDA and the SC Department of Corrections are also part of the membership.

Membership in the SC Green provides discounted event tickets, voting rights, networking opportunities and access to the latest industry developments and legislation. SC Green also offer $10,000 in scholarships annually to students planning a future in the landscape industry.

SC Green organizes multiple events throughout the year providing educational and networking opportunities. The annual Conference and Trade Show is slated for January 28-29, 2021, and the Columbia Metropolitan Convention Center Regional social events and membership drives will be held in October and November; see the SC Green website, scgreen.org, for details.
